Indy Parks reminds residents to avoid cold temps by visiting its family centers

INDIANAPOLIS – With the colder weather, Indy Parks encourages residents to visit one of its family centers, many of which have daily activities, special programs and classes, and recreational options.

These indoor offerings also include Garfield Park’s Art Center and Conservatory, Eagle Creek Park’s Discovery Center and Ornithology Center, Holliday Park’s Nature Center, and Perry Park’s Ice Skating Rink.

“We know the frigid temperatures leave a lot of people scrambling to find indoor options to be with their friends and families,” said Linda Broadfoot, Director of Indy Parks. “Our family centers and facilities are well-known for their creative programming and activities. Inside and out, Indy Parks is ready to help residents stay active during the winter months and beyond.”

Through December and into January, Indy Parks will follow this schedule:

Holiday Schedule (Dec.19-Jan.2) – View Schedule Online

Dec. 19-22: Parks and facilities will follow their regular schedules.

Dec. 23-26: Free admission to Eagle Creek Park. All family centers, indoor pools, & facilities will be closed. Administrative Office and Customer Service Center will also be closed (these two offices are not open on the weekends).
